Reflection.— Feast of St. Joseph the Worker May 1st. “In 1955, Pope Pius XII indicated St. Joseph's role in the fight against Communism when he proclaimed May 1st as the Feast of St. Joseph the Worker. This day had been set apart by the Communist Party as a day of worldwide public demonstrations on a grandiose scale, to proclaim the "glories" of Communism and to flaunt its claims of tremendous progress and power. By dedicating this day to St. Joseph, the Holy Father, so to say, Christianized it as a holyday for workmen, and thus offered a powerful challenge on the part of the Church to counteract the influence of Communism...Pope Pius wrote: "The Church, always moved by religious considerations, has condemned the various systems of Marxist socialism and She condemns them still, for it is ever Her duty and right to save men from movements and influences that endanger their everlasting salvation." He stressed the fact that this Feast was to be an opposing current to the discord, hatred and violence with which Communists had marked the celebration of their May-day...Much is written on labor and its problems from an economic and social angle. Popes Leo XIII, St. Pius X, and Benedict XV had already pointed to St. Joseph as the Church's "labor leader." Pope Leo XIII wrote: "By special right the needy and the laborers, all of lesser influence, ought to fly to the protection of St. Joseph and learn to imitate him." St. Pius X composed a most meaningful prayer to St. Joseph, Model of Laborers, which he often used. Pope Benedict XV wrote: "With great solicitude we place St. Joseph before those who work for a living, in order that they may follow him as their special guide and honor him as their heavenly patron." As the diabolical forces of Communism attempt to reclaim, to spread, and to deceive huge numbers of the gullible, the intercession of St. Joseph to save the world from Marxist enslavement is still very much needed.”—Salve Maria Regina
