The Roman Catechism

Part II: The Sacraments — The Holy Eucharist (cont'd.)

The Mystery of Transubstantiation

The next point to be explained is that the substance of the bread and wine does not continue to exist in the Sacrament after consecration. This truth, although well calculated to excite our profound admiration, is yet a necessary consequence from what has been already established.

Proof From The Dogma Of The Real Presence

If, after consecration, the true body of Christ is present under the species of bread and wine, since it was not there before, it must have become present either by change of place, or by creation, or by the change of some other thing into it. It cannot be rendered present by change of place, because it would then cease to be in heaven; for whatever is moved must necessarily cease to occupy the place from which it is moved. Still less can we suppose the body of Christ to be rendered present by creation; nay, the very idea is inconceivable. In order that the body of our Lord be present in the Sacrament, it remains, therefore, that it be rendered present by the change of the bread into it. Wherefore it is necessary that none of the substance of the bread remain.

Proof From The Councils

Hence our predecessors in the faith, the Fathers of the General Councils of Lateran and of Florence, confirmed by solemn decrees the truth of this dogma. In the Council of Trent it was still more fully defined in these words: If any one shall say that in the most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist the substance of the bread and wine remains, together with the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema.

Announcements

Last Sunday, Oct. 15, we had a parish vote regarding the appointment of John Wright to the board of trustees and our parish becoming a fully incorporated, legal entity of the CMRI. Quorum was achieved, and the total number of ballots cast was 40. The results of the vote can be found on the opposite page of this bulletin.

Next Sunday, Oct. 29, is the Feast of Christ the King, instituted by Pope Pius XI in 1925. Our evening Mass will be followed by Benediction and common recitation of the Act of Consecration of the Human Race to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

The Mater Dei Sisters will once again visit us and teach Catechism lessons to our children. This will take place at the Armco Park Pavilion on Saturday, Nov. 18, the weekend before Thanksgiving. The exact time is still to be determined. Fr. Trough will offer a Catechism lesson for adults concomitantly.

All Saints' Day falls on Wednesday of next week, Nov. 1. It is a Holyday of Obligation, and Holy Mass will be offered at St. Therese at 8:00 am.
